CHAPTER XVII

IN SMALL CANOES FROM TARAPOTO TO CANELOS :
500 MILES ON THE HUALLAGA, MARAÑON, PASTASA,
AND BOMBONASA RIVERS

(March 23 to June 14, 1857)

[THIS journey up the little-known Pastasa and Bombonasa rivers in small canoes for a distance of perhaps 500 miles, following the curves of the rivers, was a very painful and tedious one, owing to the whole country being almost depopulated, and provisions not to be obtained. It occupied nearly three months, of which Spruce kept a very full account in his Journal, and as the whole route is almost unknown to English naturalists, I have selected all the more interesting portions (about one-half) for presentation here. It is full of details which may be useful to future travellers, and contains a good deal of curious information as well as several rather strange occurrences. Some German botanists who descended the rivers from Canelos in 1894 found the villages rather better peopled on account of the increasing rubber-trade, but otherwise just as Spruce described them.]
